Demo: Danny and the Baxter Thread Master

Thread shapes, as it turns out, are as numerous as turning tools. Hand chasing threads presents its own list of problems, too many, drunken threads, hardwood. The Baxter is not cheap, but if you plan on threading a lot of boxes, it's worth it.

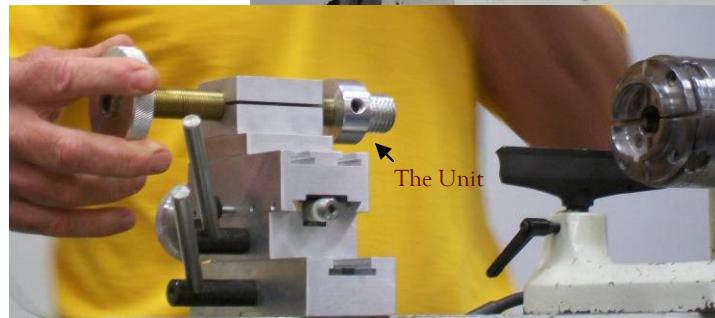

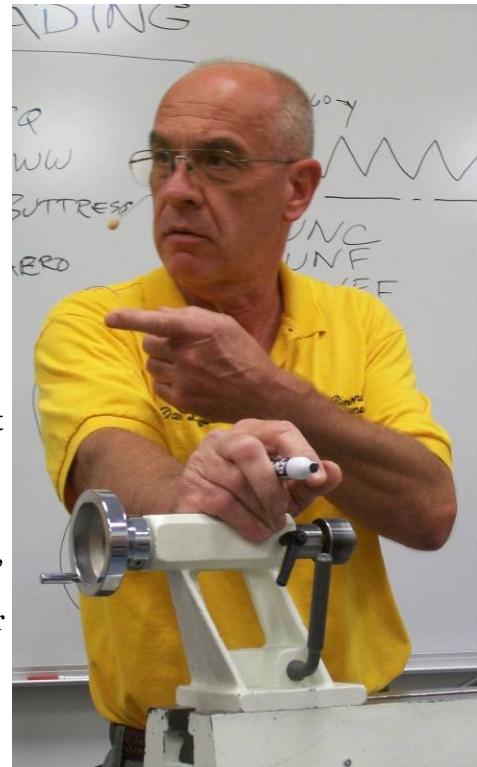

When ordering one, get it to fit your lathe's height, model & an adapter chuck. Standard is 16 threads per inch, but for more money you can get others too.

First, turn your dry stock round, flatten the ends and cut a tenon on each end. Part off the top from the bottom and mount the base in a 4-jaw chuck. Cut a spigot with parallel straight sides, measure the diameter, calculate the number of threads, make a 1/16" undercut and chamfer the leading & trailing sides. Load up the cutter in the head stock, and make the threads.

Next, hollow out the base, Mount the top into the chuck. Start hollowing out the top. Measure the inside diameter and cut parallel straight sides. Undercut the insides

1/16", chamfer the leading edge. Put the cutter in the tail stock. Position the unit, calculate the number of threads needed, lube the wood with mineral oil and slowly turn wood into the cutter. Clean out the threads with a tooth brush. Thread the base onto the top. Mark where the two meet. If there is a gap, cut the threads deeper and maybe an extra thread so the top fits snug.

Read Ray's thoughts on end grain sealing on our web site.

Pen Turners: November Meeting, 2nd Thursday, 7pm: Turn a Hollow Holly Xmas Ornament & Cure the See-through tube problem on your acrylic pens.

Safety First,

Follow the instruction manual for your tools

The

[Danny] Female threads are always cut deeper by a thread than the male part. A Sorby thread gauge can be helpful in setting up the distance travels by the unit. A jam chuck will help you finish the bottom of the box .

Lee is ordering badges, laser cut from Apple Valley Turners. Contact him to get on the list.

Meeting Vibrations

Picnic at Sid & Penny See pictures elsewhere in newsletter

On line (somewhere on World of Wood website) is a photo of what happens when you don't follow the instructions given with the Merlin wood grinder "mini-chain saw". What a close shave and the guy survived!

Don Hart is stepping down from VIP. Some retired presidents will fill in until the election of new officer in December. Process starts next month.

Cindy Drozda will be here January 19,20,21. We need your help on publicizing her (Cindy Drozda) visit in our newsletter and on our website. Cindy has given her permission to use the documents attached to her email below. Note that Cindy says she is linking us on her website. Thank you very much. Jim

FOR SALE, BUY, or TRADE

Ray Deyo offers a 10% discount on non-power tools and supplies on meeting nights at Woodcraft for members only. Another very good reason to join us every month!

Free Tree

It dawned on me that the fallen cherry tree in my backyard due to the hurricane may be of value to someone other than as kindling. Would you or someone at Richmond Woodturners be interested in obtaining some of this wood?

Thanks, Tim York
