Chuck Mosser and the Lidded Box

1. Dry straight grain wood is a must. Mount a block between center and mark out the top & bottom (2/5 top, 3/5 bottom is a common dimension). Make it round. Make a tenon on each end. Part away the top from bottom.
2. Mount the top in 4-jaw chuck. Hollow out the top, make sure the sides are parallel and cut a recessed edge. Sand and finish the top inside.
3. Mount the bottom into the 4-jaw chuck. Drill out most of the bottom, leaving room for the bottom finishing
4. Mark the depth of the top's recess with calipers. Cut in with a skew to minimize tear out. With a parting tool finish the recess to a tight fit. Do a little at a time and use the lid to check the fit. Taper the edge a little first then straight sides. Sand and finish the inside. Check the fit.
5. Put the top on the bottom. (Paper towel will insure a very tight fit). Bring up the tail stock with a cup center and turn the box round. Remove the tail center and finish the top of the lid.
6. Make a jam chuck for the bottom , blue painter tap it on and finish the bottom. Make a slight concave so it sits flat.
7. Chuck also puts threads into some of his boxes. ABS /PVC male & female threads. Just cut off a few thread & epoxy them into our box. He also gets his wife (the beader) to add glass pull knobs to some.
